Table of Contents

Tachibana Takashi analyzes the impact of World War II on Tokyo University and Tokyo University’s impact on the war: attacks from outside, faculty politics and purges, institutional expansion, the sacrifice of liberal arts students to the war machine, and heroic dissenting professors who tried in vain to bring the war to an early end.

1: Copyright

1: Chapters

- 1.1: Deans, Faculty of Economics, 1933-1953
- 1.2: The Tōdai Faculty of Law- Taboo and Disgrace
- 1.3: Tōdai Presidents, 1928-1977
- 1.4: Yanaihara Tadao- A Christian Against the Establishment
- 1.5: Yanaihara’s Expulsion at the Hands of the “Fat Pig”
- 1.6: Epilogue- The Day of Defeat- For Japan and for Tokyo Imperial University
- 1.7: Hiraga’s Tōdai- Flourishing under the Wartime Order
- 1.8: Kawai’s Shrewd Plan- “Either Not Guilty or a Heavy Sentence”
- 1.9: President Nambara and the Argument that the Shōwa Emperor Should Abdicate
- 1.10: Spy H., Who Sent Professors of Economics to Prison
- 1.11: Tanaka Kōtarō, Guiding Spirit of the Hiraga Purge, Beset on All Sides
- 1.12: The Collapse of the Kawai Faction: the War Economy Study Group
- 1.13: The Emperor Learns of The War-Termination Maneuvers of the Tōdai Seven
• 1.14: The Great Purge of the Faculty of Economics by Hiraga Yuzuru, Battleship President
• 1.15: The Popular Front Against Fascism and Kawai Eijirō
• 1.16: The Small-minded Makeshifts of Maide Chōgorō, Dean of the Deadlocked Faculty of Economics
• 1.17: The Travails of Tsuda Sōkichi, Attacked as ‘Traitor’

• Back Matter
  • Index
  • 2: Glossary of Names, Terms, and Events